Scholars Welcomed

By: Lucie Serravo
University of Oregon Clark Honors College – Tuesday, February 4, 2003

On January 31, 2003 the University of Oregon welcomed prospective students to a university Scholars Recognition day. The Clark Honors College joined with the university by welcoming and providing information and tours about the honors college.

The students who came to the Scholars Recognition day event are exceptional students who were indecisive of their choice of schools and the university provided an opportunity for them to learn more about the UO. Clark Honors College took the allotted time to present the wonderful benefits of the honors college.

With the help of Clark Honors College Tour Guides, 50 students and their parents toured the honors college. After walking the guests from the EMU to Chapman Hall the group was separated into two and off went one group into the meeting room to watch the Welcome Video, while the other group stayed in the library and discussed the requirements of the honors college. Professor Dennis Todd was available after the two groups were finished to answer any questions and mingle with the prospective honors college students. Mints and nuts were provided to welcome the guests and help them feel comfortable at the Clark Honors College.

The event went smoothly, even with the late start of the tour guides meeting the students and parents at the EMU. Dividing the groups could have been smoother and handouts would allow the people to be more interactive. Rooms 303 and 301 were warmer than usual.
